CONSTITUTION
JEFFERSON'S MANUAL
AND RULES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES

WITH A DIGEST OF THE PRACTICE

SIXTY-FIRST CONGRESS
FIRST SESSION

Prepared by

ASHER C. HINDS

pursuant to a resolution of the House passed July 12, 1909

WASHINGTON
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE

1909

Rules of the §§ 654, 655.

Rule IX.

This rule was adopted in 1880 (III, 2521). It merely put in form of definition what had been long established in the practice of the House; but what the House had hitherto been unwilling to define (II, 1603).

The privilege of the House, as distinguished from that of the § 654. Privilege of the House. individual Member, includes questions relating to its constitutional prerogatives, in respect to revenue legislation and appropriations (II, 1480-1501); including revenue, and other treaties (II, 1502-1537); its power to punish for contempt, whether of its own Members (II, 1641-1665), of witnesses who are summoned to give information (II, 1608, 1612; III, 1666-1724), or of other persons (II, 1597-1640); questions relating to its organization (I, 22-24, 189, 212, 290), and the title of its Members to their seats (III, 2579-2587), including various questions incidental thereto. (I, 322, 328, 673, 742; II, 1207; III, 2588); the conduct of officers and employees (I, 284, 285; III, 2628, 2645-2647); comfort and convenience of Members and employees (III, 2629-2636); admission to the floor of the House (III, 2624-2626); the accuracy and propriety of reports in the Congressional Record (V, 7005-7023); the conduct of representatives of the press (II, 1630, 1631; III, 2627); the protection of papers in its files, especially when demanded by the courts (III, 2660-2664); the integrity of its Journal (II, 1363; III, 2620); the protection of its records (III, 2659); the accuracy of its documents (V, 7329), and messages (III, 2613); and the integrity of the processes by which bills are considered (III, 2597-2601, 2614; IV, 3383, 3388, 3478).

The privilege of the Member rests primarily on the Constitution which gives to him a conditional immunity from arrest; and an unconditional freedom of debate in the House (III, 2670). A menace to the personal safety of Members from an insecure ceiling in the Hall was held to involve a question of the highest privilege (III, 2685); and § 655. Privilege of the Member.

A bill being missing, the House resolved that a protestation should be made and subscribed by the members "before Almighty God, and this honorable House, that neither myself, nor any other to my knowledge, have taken away, or do at this present conceal a bill entitled," &c. 5 Grey, 202.

After a bill is engrossed, it is put into the Speaker's hands, and he is not to let any one have it to look into. Town, col. 209.

In the House of Representatives an alleged improper alteration of a bill was presented as a question of privilege and examined by a select committee. It being ascertained that the alteration was made to correct a clerical error, the committee reported that it was "highly censurable in any Member or officer of the House to make any change, even the most unimportant, in any bill or resolution which has received the sanction of this body" (III, 2598). Engrossed bills do not go into the Speaker's hands. Enrolled bills go to him for signature.

SEC. XVII.—ORDER IN DEBATE.

§ 346. Decorum of Members as to sitting in their places.

When the Speaker is seated in his chair, every member is to sit in his place. Scob., 6; Grey, 403.

In the House of Representatives the decorum of Members is regulated by the various sections of Rule XIV; and this provision of the parliamentary law is practically obsolete.

in which the previous question is called for are fair and proper subjects of public discussion and ought not to be obstructed by a formality introduced for questions of a peculiar character.

This discussion has no bearing on the modern uses of the previous question.

SEC. XXXV.—AMENDMENTS.

§ 458. Right of the Member who has spoken to the main question to speak to an amendment.

On an amendment being moved, a Member who has spoken to the main question may speak again to the amendment. Scob., 23.

This parliamentary rule is of effect in the House of Representatives, where the hour rule of debate (Rule XIV, §2) has been in force for many years. A Member who has spoken an hour to the main question, may speak another hour to an amendment (V, 4994).

If an amendment be proposed inconsistent with one already agreed to, it is a fit ground for its rejection by the House, but not within the competence of the Speaker to suppress as if it were against order. For were he permitted to draw questions of consistence within the vortex of order, he might usurp a negative on important modifications, and suppress, instead of subserving, the legislative will.

§ 459. The Speaker not to decide as to consistency of a proposed amendment with one already agreed to.

The practice of the House of Representatives follows and extends the principle set forth by Jefferson. Thus it has been held that the fact that a proposed amendment is inconsistent with the text
